Hello,

I am writing to express my dissatisfaction with the proposed antitrust settlement with Microsoft.

I believe that this settlement does nothing to prohibit Microsoft from continuing its predatory practices in information technology. This settlement has little provision to prevent Microsoft from asserting that any other applications are now part of their Windows operating systems, or from using their strong position in that market to thwart other innovations in different applications.

I fully support the right of Microsoft to continue to develop its products and innovate as they see fit. However, as a confirmed monopoly, they have a specific responsibility to ensure that their monopoly does not illegally extend into emerging markets.

I also fear the enforcement of this agreement. It should be recalled that Microsoft's brazen indifference to their 1995 consent decree began this particular case.

Thank you for your consideration,
